

Zoriss Zoriss let the spiders out she likes to listen to the sound the clinking of their pointed spindly legs At night she goes out canvassing Down the shadowed city streets. They follow close behind her (steps) and her reaction in warm smiles is quite heady With the flowing of black webbing her hair sways like pitch smoke leaves. And the strangers hang by with wonder from the queer curving of her lips. Her pants cover her ankles Like the clouds cover the moon And the shoelaces of her sneakers bare small stars opened as eyes White pallid little spies As she serenades the spiders just by passing through.
