

Home Fires Burning

Two stories, two couples, two eras, timeless emotions. This Ground Which Was Secured at Great Expense It is 1914 and The Great War is underway. When the call to arms comes, Nicholas Southwell wont be found hanging back. Its a pity he cant be so decisive when it comes to letting his estate manager Paul Haskell know what he feels before he has to leave for the front line. In the trenches Nicholas meets a fellow officer, Phillip Taylor, who takes him into the unclaimed territory of physical love. Which one will he choose, if hes allowed the choice? The Case of the Overprotective Ass Stars of the silver screen Alasdair Hamilton and Toby Bowe are wowing the post WWII audiences with their depictions of Holmes and Watson. When they are asked by a friend to investigate a mysterious disappearance, they jump at the chance - surely detection cant be that hard? But a series of threatening letters - and an unwanted suitor - make real life very different from the movies. Charlie Cochrane, author of the delightful Cambridge Fellows series, brings her familiar romantic, roguish style to the two novellas that together are Home Fires Burning.
