

Every Atom Belonging

All the money in the world, or a world that knows not money...whats it gonna be? Kidnapped and forced to work in a secret government facility, a rogue scientist finally escapes with more than just his freedom. Chris Rains, a physics genius attending The Massachusetts Institute of Technology, mysteriously vanishes along with his fiancée. Years later, however, Chris pays a visit to his old friend, Adam, abruptly pulling him from his comfortable, mundane existence the night he shows Adam a device capable of rearranging one form of matter into any other. Eventually the device could mean free access to basic necessities for everyone on the planet. There's just one problem: getting rid of money is one thing, but greed is a whole nother matter entire. Chris could make a fortune with the device, but he couldnt care less about wealth. His idea? Over-production of anything valuable, from pearls to platinum, until everything rare becomes entirely commonplace. His enemies? To many to count...The line between priceless and worthless has never been so thin.
