

The Churchill Veto

1942 - its wartime Britain and Winston Churchill announces that preparations are underway against a possible German gas attack. Over the following years, a group of people work on a weapon for a secret government project, but each is unaware of its true purpose, believing it is a battlefield communications device. Nor do they know what parts others are assembling. Then, after a serious accident during testing reveals immense and hideous dangers, the project is cancelled and the assemblies are ordered destroyed by the Prime Minister - but one unit has unknowingly been stolen. This goes missing, only to surface some decades later. Those that come into contact with it develop alarming symptoms and a panic then ensues as the British government and secret service try to retrieve the deadly weapon to prevent a potential disaster for mankind. At the same time they find they are working against a foreign government who want it for more sinister reasons.
